

Challenging convention: Re-making troubled areas into vibrant neighbourhoods

Nathan Cornish, Director, Urban Splash Midlands

Nathan graduated from Reading University in 1996 and started his career working for Slough Estates plc (1996-1998) and then Saville Gordon Estates plc (1998-2001) working on a variety of development projects throughout the UK. Tired, though, of the traditional thinking of a plc Nathan wanted a change. Because of its growing reputation for quality, and doing things differently, Nathan decided to join Urban Splash in January 2002.

Nathan is the Director responsible for Urban Splash's Midlands operations which include:

The Rotunda
Fort Dunlop
Walsall Waterfront

Nathan is also responsible for Chimney Pot Park in Salford, Greater Manchester - a residential scheme that literally turns the traditional terrace house upside down!

Nathan, like Urban Splash as a group, relishes tackling notoriously tricky projects that the market says can't be delivered – as evidenced by Fort Dunlop.

Nathan is a Member of the RICS, loves architecture and supports Nottingham Forest Football club (no jokes please!)